Chairman's welcome

Bliadhna Mhath Ùr Dhuibh Uile! A good New Year to you all.

The John Muir Trust certainly had a good – and busy – 2010 having launched our new Vision, agreed the linked Strategic Plan, and committed to a five-year rolling budget to help support its implementation.

For my own part, I also spent time raising awareness of the Trust's work while holidaying in the US. While there, I again met with representatives of the Sierra Club as well as senior parties from both the Nature Conservancy and Wilderness Society – all much larger organisations than our own, but with whom we nevertheless share a common philosophy.

Back on home turf, our staff reorganisation is almost complete, although there have been some goodbyes, including Andrew Campbell, Head of Land Management, who has served the Trust with distinction for 13 years. We send him every good wish for the future. We are fortunate throughout the Trust to have very enthusiastic and effective staff and, in recognition of their valued contribution over the past year, I wish them all well for the New Year.

I would also like to record our appreciation of Sue Hopkinson and Bob Aitken who both stood down as Trustees during the year. Each has contributed greatly to our strategic direction over many years. Also on this page, you will see the annual call for Trustees. We are looking for five in total and would particularly encourage female members and those from England and Wales to come forward.

As many of you will know, 2011 has been designated as the European Year of Volunteering. According to the European Union website, almost 100 million citizens of all ages invest their time, talent and money to make a positive contribution to their community through volunteering.

Here at the Trust, we simply could not do without our cohort of regular volunteers who give of their time to us. These volunteers and the 20,000 plus John Muir Award participants who carry out conservation work each year make a very tangible difference and I would like to thank each and every one of them. If you would like to get involved in volunteering in 2011, turn to page five for a host of opportunities.

Turning now to our appeals over the past 12 months, our members and supporters have once again been overwhelming in their support. When we launched our Sandwood Footpath Appeal in June, we initially asked for £20,000, but you provided £48,000 – while the additional gift aid takes the amount to £58,748.

Thanks to your kind donations and the hard work of people on the ground, a long stretch of path leading down to the shore of Loch a' Mhuilinn has now been completely rebuilt, with much more to follow over the coming year. Likewise, support for the Wild Land Campaign appeal continues to gather momentum. More details on progress to date can be found on page two.

Over the past year, I was also very pleased to attend member meetings in Glasgow, London and Bristol and hope to join many more such get-togethers in 2011. Our main gathering, of course, will be the AGM in June when we move the event south to the Rheged Centre near Penrith, Cumbria. I very much hope to see you there – please book early.

And, as we enter 2011, it is worth considering some words from the man who continues to inspire everything that we do here at the Trust:

"Take a course in good water and air; and in the eternal youth of Nature you may renew your own. Go quietly, alone; no harm will befall you." John Muir

CALL FOR TRUSTEES

Nominations are being sought for new Trustees, with a deadline of 28 February. We have five positions to fill on our total board of 15 and we especially encourage female members and those from England and Wales to step forward as we look to achieve the best possible overall balance.

Following further assessment of the collective experience and skills base of current Trustees, we would particularly benefit from more experience in the fields of education, farming and youth development. Members are urged to propose suitable candidates.

Of course, becoming a Trustee is a big step and involves a three-year-term commitment to helping move our organisation forward. The board meets four or five times a year, usually in Edinburgh or Pitlochry, with one weekend in the Highlands close to one of our estates. Nomination forms for Trustees can be downloaded from our website, or obtained from the Pitlochry office on 01796 470 080.

Strong response to Wild Land Campaign

Our Wild Land Campaign continues to gather pace as people sign up to help us achieve our goal of gaining adequate protection for wild land. Petition signatures have been collected at events around the country and now total more than 3,000 for the Scottish Parliament petition and slightly less for the UK petition.

In addition, we have also collected £15,000 from our ongoing Wild Land Campaign appeal – vital funds that will allow us to take exhibition stands at public events and defend wild land in key planning cases.

In this initial phase of the campaign, we have been 'setting out our stall' – launching our Vision, sharing findings from mapping wild land and talking to like-minded organisations about the urgent threats facing our landscapes. As a result, a UK Landscapes Campaign Group has been established and the Trust will be working with other groups to jointly highlight some of our major campaign issues. There will be an opportunity to hear from Friends of the Lake District and the Yorkshire Dales Society at the policy discussion at our AGM.

What is clear is that 2011 will be a crucial year for highlighting our message. With elections for the Scottish Parliament as well as some English unitary authorities, all of which have a strategic planning role, we have an excellent opportunity to highlight our concerns about the impact of badly-sited developments on wild places.

For the campaign to be a success, it is essential that our members also raise these issues with election candidates, preferably with a relevant local example. For guidance, please see our campaign webpage for sample letters that can be sent to electoral candidates or your local newspaper. And don't forget to encourage community councils to hold local election 'hustings' where candidates can be quizzed on how they plan to safeguard wild places for future generations to enjoy.

SHEILA BELL OF GLENLUDE

PHOTOGRAPH: DENIS MOLLISON

We are sad to report the death on 14 November of Sheila Bell, who gave Glenlud – a hill farm in the Tweed Valley – to the Trust in 2004.

Sheila (pictured above with Crispin Agnew and Nigel Hawkins at Glenlud in 2004) was born in Uganda in 1943, the youngest of three children of Beatrix and Sydney Laws. As a child she set her heart on flying. However, in her social background, career options for girls were very limited so she trained first as a secretary, working for UNICEF and East African Airways as she saved the money needed for flying lessons.

Qualifying in her mid-20s, she worked as a pilot flying all over Africa, even managing her own company, Coast Air. Marrying an agricultural consultant, she worked with him for a time as his pilot.

Sheila moved to England, after her marriage ended, to look after her father and found a new career as a computing specialist. Finally, after his death, she concentrated on a love she had always had, of nature. Intelligent and a perfectionist in all she did, Sheila set out to create her own reserve for wild land and wildlife, and to live on it in the most environmentally friendly way.

Sheila bought 400 acres of hilltop south of Innerleithen in the Scottish Borders, half of it covered in forestry plantation, and set out to convert it into natural woodland, meanwhile living in temporary accommodation on site while she designed her dream green home.

Although one of the most self-sufficient of people, she was both practical and thoughtful in helping others, whether family, friends or neighbours. Sadly, the hard life on her hill-top home took its toll on her health, though to the end she was indomitable and ambitious in her conservation work and plans.

But Sheila knew her project would take more than her own lifetime, so she approached the John Muir Trust to act as long-term guardians of Glenlud. In 2004, the Trustees accepted her generous gift under an agreement whereby she would continue to manage the property during her lifetime.

The warmth and inspiration Sheila showed was reflected in the ceremony of her funeral at Glenlud (pictured above), where she now lies buried in the place that she loved. We hope that the Trust can fulfil her vision for this wild hill.

With thanks to Denis Mollison

PLANNING UPDATE

The Trust is pleased that plans for a gold mine below Ben Lui in Glen Cononish (pictured left) were rejected by the Loch Lomond and the Trossachs National Park. We submitted a conditional objection to the plans because we were not satisfied by claims that tonnes of waste extracted from the mine would have no impact on the landscape.

We were joined by other groups, including the Mountaineering Council of Scotland, which shared our concerns about the potential impacts of the mine, including halting ice climbing on Beinn Udlaidh, and providing walkers on the West Highland Way with an industrial welcome to Strathfillan.

We welcomed the decision as confirmation that environmental issues have priority within the National Park. However, at the time of going to press, the developer Scotgold Resources has lodged an appeal with the Scottish Government.

Elsewhere, the Trust has also taken the opportunity to review the amended planning application for the Viking wind development in Shetland. We are disappointed that despite strong arguments against the size, scale and environmental impact the development would have on the wild character of Shetland mainland, the developer has only reduced the proposal by 23 turbines.

We have significant concerns over planned construction of the remaining 127 turbines – some in areas of deep peat bog. As a result, the Trust has chosen to maintain its objection to the proposal, as have RSPB Scotland and Scottish Natural Heritage.

John Muir Award milestones

In November, a pupil from Ballater Primary School became the 10,000th person to achieve a John Muir Award in the Cairngorms National Park. Michael Mitchell (pictured) who is in Primary 7, was presented with his award by Roseanna Cunningham MSP, Minister for Environment, who commented: "Learning in the outdoors can make significant contributions to literacy, numeracy and health and well-being. The John Muir Award plays an important part in this by motivating people to get outdoors and make the most of their natural environment."

The John Muir Award is undertaken in many schools in the National Park, including Ballater Primary School, which was presented with its own special certificate to mark the occasion. Head Teacher Louise Duckworth said: "I am delighted both for Michael and the school to receive this award. It acknowledges the hard work by all involved – pupils, staff and parents. It also underpins not only the John Muir Award work undertaken in the school as part of our core curriculum but also our wider eco-school strategy."

Earlier in the year, two teenagers became the first people from the West Highlands to achieve the highest level of the John Muir Award. Donald Nixon, 16, from Dornie and Scott Kitson Jones, 17, from Plockton, were presented with their John Muir Conserver Awards by Trust Chairman John Hutchison at an event to recognise young people's commitment to wild places around Skye & Lochalsh.

Donald and Scott achieved their Awards through expeditions to the Cairngorms National Park and Knoydart, as well as working in partnership with the Forestry Commission at Balmacara and the John Muir Trust's Strathaird estate. Donald and Scott have also taken extra responsibility for helping lead others through the John Muir Award.

Hosted by Highland Council Youth Development Service, the event celebrated the achievements of 33 young people from or with connections to Skye and Lochalsh who all completed their John Muir Award through a variety of programmes based around the Torrinn Outdoor Centre.

PARTNERSHIP ROLES

Funding has now ended for our eight-year partnership with Cumbria Youth Alliance, which has hosted a John Muir Award Regional Manager (Graham Watson) and Inclusion Co-ordinator (Miranda Morgan) over that period. The Lake District National Park Authority (LDNPA) will take on this partnership from April, integrating the John Muir Award into its Learning Service.

LDNPA will cover the costs for the Trust to employ Graham as Regional Manager for a year, at which point this hosting arrangement will be reviewed. Graham will adopt a part time 'holding role', employed by the Trust, from January to March. In the meantime, we continue to seek funding to restart the Inclusion role in 2011. For now, Miranda is part of the Award team managing our England activity for two days per week.

In other news, Amy Boud has completed a two-year contract with the Youth Hostel Association (YHA) to manage the John Muir Award, primarily as part of the YHA Do it 4 Real Summer Camps. YHA no longer has funding to employ a dedicated John Muir Award Manager, although management of our working relationship will be integral to a new national YHA Activity Manager post. This will create a staffing model with exciting potential to build on Amy's exemplary work and extend the reach of the Award within YHA.

Those of you who have had the pleasure of working alongside Graham, Miranda and Amy will know that they have all been terrific ambassadors for the John Muir Trust in these partnership roles.

FUNDRAISING THANK YOU

We would like to thank everyone who fundraised for the John Muir Trust in 2010. From car boot sales to mountain challenge events, our members and supporters raised more than £20,000 during the course of the year.

Some of the great challenges undertaken included Spyke's record-breaking Munro Round; Andrew Underdown's 1,200-mile trek from Cape Cornwall to Cape Wrath; Roger Marsden's 12-day cycle from Land's End to John O'Groats; and Kevin Beck and Stuart Welsh's 'Great UK Mountain and Cycling Challenge' (pictured below on Scafell Pike).

Clearly, imagination – in addition to stamina – is not in short supply when it comes to fundraising, with everything from sock exchanges to Wild Nature Diary recycling schemes undertaken to raise funds throughout the UK.

We would also like to thank Sue Hopkinson and all those involved in the Ullapool Gathering for their fundraising again this year, while we are very grateful to corporate members Edinburgh Mountain Film Festival and Tiso which both ran raffles on our behalf in October.

Finally, the Trust would also particularly like to thank all the friends and families who fundraised in memory of their loved ones in 2010.

If you have an idea for raising funds in 2011, or would like to take part in a challenge event on behalf of the Trust, contact Maggie on 0131 554 0114, or promotions@jmt.org

WIN A PAINTING FROM SKYE

Artist Shazia Mahmood has very kindly donated one of her recent paintings of a scene from the Isle of Skye for a raffle to help raise funds for the John Muir Trust. The painting, Loch Eishort from Drumfearn (pictured below, 40x100cm, RRP £1,580), is typical of the style of an artist for whom the West Coast of Scotland has become a regular source of inspiration.

If you would like to own this superb painting, raffle tickets are now available from the Cambridge Contemporary Art Gallery. Tickets cost £5 each and the winner will be drawn on 30 April during the preview for Shazia's solo show at the gallery. The exhibition will run until 22 May. All proceeds from the sale of raffle tickets will go to the John Muir Trust.

Spotlight on biodiversity

As many of you will know, 2010 was designated as the United Nations (UN) International Year of Biodiversity – a global effort to bring nature conservation issues to a wider audience.

In the UK, the message about the value of biodiversity was delivered by more than 450 organisations, including the Trust. Unfortunately – although perhaps unsurprisingly – the UN's wider target for halting biodiversity loss was not met, though there were some notable achievements including a proposed new Intergovernmental Platform on Biodiversity and Ecosystem Services.

Meanwhile, in October, the UN Convention on Biological Diversity partners met in Nagoya, Japan to determine the next steps for biodiversity conservation globally. These are summarised in the resulting Strategic Plan for 2011-2020 which essentially produced more targets to be developed at a European and country level in an attempt to halt biodiversity loss.

At the forefront of current thinking is conservation at the ecosystem and landscape level – something that the Trust has advocated for some time. Such an approach recognises that healthy ecosystems are vital for maintaining and enhancing biodiversity and also provide goods and services that benefit people.

These so-called 'ecosystem services' can be grouped into four categories: provisioning, such as the production of energy and food; regulating, such as carbon sequestration; supporting, such as nutrient cycles and crop pollination; and cultural, such as inspiration and recreation.

Individual countries in the UK are now formulating their response to the new UN targets and exploring how they can be implemented at the national level.

As a landowner that focusses on landscape-scale management, the Trust is well positioned to contribute to new targets for healthy ecosystems and will continue to work hard to that end.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

We welcome feedback on items appearing in Trust publications and will publish a highlight of correspondence received. Here, two members comment on our coverage of the Cape Wrath Challenge in the July 2010 edition of Members' News

Dear Sir

Thank you for the latest members' newsletter and some interesting articles – especially Spyke's record run. However the phrase shaving [off] nine days seems inappropriate. It should be more like shattered!

There are also other words which could be better used. Breathtaking is a bit over-the-top – we all know what wonderful scenery there is in the UK, especially in Scotland. When the summit of a mountain or a cliff top is reached, we are usually so out of breath that we rarely appreciate the view.

I'm not sure that I like the idea of a regular marathon to Cape Wrath. I've walked there a couple of times and I think it's better to leave the area wild.

Regards
Roger Legg, Bromley, Kent

Dear Sir

Spyke's achievement on the Munros was truly amazing, but am I alone in being a bit uneasy at the Trust promoting this sort of activity? There is inevitably a flavour of conquering the mountains and we are surely looking to nurture a non-dominant view of our relationship with the wild.

The last newsletter also had a plug for the Cape Wrath Challenge and appeared not to notice the irony of mentioning "the kind of tranquillity that can only be found in such remote areas". Not on that day I fear. Meanwhile our Chairman mentioned the problems of charity events on Ben Nevis and our effort to reduce human impact. Somewhat mixed messages, it seems.

I'm not suggesting we should obstruct those who want to test themselves in wild country, but I doubt we should be publicising and implicitly encouraging these activities. Nor should we be guided by the fundraising – the same effort directed differently might raise just as much if not more, without the 'beating nature' connotations or the extra motoring that these events tend to involve. Indeed, I feel we should be true to our principles and refuse any funds raised by such means.

Regards
Bill Ball, Nettleham, Lincs

Busy year for conservation work parties

With a total of 135 people donating more than 600 days of volunteering, 2010 was another outstanding year for conservation work parties. In all we ran 21 work parties that included for the first time a very productive week on one of our partner's properties, the Corrou Estate.

Familiar tasks and locations were not forgotten, however, with more than 500 bin bags of rubbish removed from 10 beaches – including a massive push at Camasunary on Skye that resulted in a letter of congratulations from Prince Charles!

Elsewhere, fences were repaired and one very significant milestone was reached when volunteers removed around 600 metres of deer fence erected following our purchase of Li & Coire Dhorrcail in the 1980s. Happily, the trees there are now tall enough to fend for themselves without the need for fencing.

Work parties are free, open to all and a great opportunity to learn about the conservation management of our own and partners' properties. The following account of participating in a work party at Sandwood by Trust member Gill Allen provides a flavour of what to expect:

"I had travelled from urban south London, almost the diagonal length of Britain, to join a diverse group of volunteers at Sandwood Bay for my first John Muir Trust work party. In a way, I had already been to the area. Growing up in Australia in the 1970s, I remember listening to the clipped tones of the Shipping Forecast on the BBC's Home Service around the time when my English mother would listen to the Goon Show. Having heard the names of end-of-the-world places such as 'Cape Wrath', little did I know that some 40 years later I would be helping repair a stretch of footpath near the same faraway place.

As a group, we observed where water had formed into pools fed by the myriad of mini-estuaries that trickled from the peatlands, leading walkers to deviate from the path and inadvertently add to its erosion. I became an engineer, digging channels to help with drainage and transplanting blocks of heather and stone to recreate a natural boundary to guide walkers into staying within the confines of the path.

After two days, we had progressed ever closer to what many of us had come to see, and our Trust mentor Sandy Maxwell announced it was time to head to the beach itself. After walking another mile in the mist, we gazed awestruck at Sandwood Bay. We took lunch sitting on huge dunes of delicate, pink-white sand, collectively silenced by the beauty and wildness of the place.

In the fading light, our final gesture as temporary guardians: a beach sweep which saw a seemingly forensic clean-up of mostly plastic, multi-national flotsam and jetsam. For me, it was a 2010 version of the Shipping Forecast. We had in some ways played our part in its presence, so it was therapeutic to also play a part in its removal."

AUTUMN PATH WORK UPDATE

Following our efforts the previous autumn, we headed back to Quinag in October to continue with path work – again with consultant Chris Goodman and staff from the Culag Community Woodland Trust.

This year, we successfully completed three projects: constructing 100 metres of new path linking the slab route from the stalkers' path to the shoulder of Spidean Choinich; the start of high-level work on the path up Sail Gharbh; and construction of new water bars on the lower sections of the stalkers' path.

The team then moved on for a further three weeks to tackle one of the worst sections of the Sandwood track – a 275-metre stretch of path down to Loch a' Mhuilinn. Previous attempts to confine the path had failed, with the result that the peat on either side had worn away, leaving the path to sprawl up to a width of five metres in places.

We created new drainage, added more than 200 metres of ditching and constructed a new path, just 1.5 metres wide, using a base of broken stone covered with locally excavated surfacing material. We also placed stepping stones at the burn where the path meets the loch, while the whole area was extensively landscaped to help blend the track into its setting.

Funding for both pieces of work came from Scottish National Heritage, the Scottish Mountaineering Trust, the Brown Forbes Foundation and you, our members.

NEW BORDERS MEMBERS' GROUP UNDERWAY

The first meeting of the John Muir Trust's Borders Group took place in Galashiels on 10 November. The Group was delighted to welcome Stuart Brooks, Chief Executive, to set the scene with a stimulating and wide-ranging talk on the Trust's Vision and its implications.

A lively discussion followed on wild land mapping and why the Borders, along with the southwest, receives less recognition than it merits; the growing damage to the landscape from the open season on wind farm developments; and the need to support the economies of local communities living near wild land.

This was a great start with 13 members attending – almost half of the Borders members who expressed support for establishing a Group. The next meeting, the date for which has yet to be confirmed, will focus on identifying and protecting wild land and the implications of the draft Borders supplementary planning guidance on wind energy. Suggestions for possible topics for future meetings are very welcome.

For further information, contact John Thomas, j.p.r.t@btinternet.com, or Fiona Mackintosh, JMT\_Membership\_recruit@jmt.org

EDINBURGH MEMBERS' GROUP

On 31 October, the Edinburgh Members' Group took part in the monthly volunteering day at Carrifran Wildwood in the Borders. It was a beautiful autumn day and the Carrifran Valley looked absolutely stunning. Ten volunteers were led for the day by Philip Ashmole, planting a mix of hazel, birch and oak. It was estimated that the group planted well over 200 trees.
